

Parallel Orbit

I've been chasing you now through countless lifetimes like an asteroid pushing through space and time, seeking to match you with a parallel orbit around the center of the Infinite Universe

Vast, frozen expanses of space stretch behind me cooling down since the Big Bang first erupted until they have reached the temperature of Absolute Zero and all motion comes to a complete stop...
...except for me, still endlessly seeking your warmth

But then, once every lifetime, or maybe twice, your trajectory approaches mine as we move toward each other I watch you, spellbound, as you slowly come closer I cannot pull my eyes or my attention away from you as I wait with excitement and anticipation for your gravitational field to overlap with mine

On this pass by, in this particular lifetime, you passed so close to me that I could smell your sweet aroma filling the icy cold vacuum of space overwhelming my senses and captivating me completely

This time, it was so damn close that I could almost taste you...

But this time, like too many times before, another celestial body came streaking through the cosmos, wild and erratic, oblivious to all other existence, and its gravitational force pulled at you just enough to throw our intersecting paths out of alignment

So now, as I watch you slowly diverge off in another direction I am caught in your vapor trail, lost to your senses

It is too painful to watch as your mythical beauty and wonder slowly dwindles off into the distance and is gone forever, or at least until we both pass through this small corner of the Universe again

Maybe next lifetime...

-Phil Jaderborg